DaDa: (56) 330 3232

Is located at 52 North Swinton Avenue in the heart of downtown Delray Beach serving award-winning new-American cuisine served seven days from 5pm-2am. Open since 2000, we're an eclectic restaurant with an artistic bent with each room of our historic home styled in a different theme and with different local independent artists' works adorning the walls as well as an intimate outdoor dining area and garden. We also offer an array of live entertainment every night of the week including open mic, poetry, art and fashion shows, comedy, singer-songwriters, live bands and our classic movie night on Sundays.

Max's Harvest: (561) 381 9970

The farm-to-table café has an ever-changing menu, because Chef James Kammper and general manager Pete Stampone source out produce from local farmers, as well as free-range chicken, beef that is grass-fed only rather than finished on feed lots, and line-caught fish. To make sure customers can check things out, contacts for the restaurant's sources are posted on its website. This is reassuring news to anyone who cares about eating humanely raised and environmentally responsible food, but it would not be as impressive if everything didn't taste so delicious. The restaurant combines great food you can feel good about eating with particularly attentive service and a pleasing ambience.
